About the Conference

The year 2015 marks the 25th anniversary of the entry into force of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Child (UNCRC). One of the challenges that the contemporary world faces today is ensuring basic human rights of children. Ensuring basic human rights of the vulnerable sections of society are cardinal principles of rule of law.

Initially, children were not entitled to any rights, they were often considered as beneficiaries of welfare schemes and it was the responsibility of the head of the family to provide for the welfare of children. Gradually, a shift was noticed, from the concept of children being mere recipients of welfare schemes to the entitlement of children to certain special but basic rights. Thus, developed the concept of 'child rights'.

Child rights are those rights that a person possesses by virtue of being a child. Their physical and mental immaturity, their innocence and inexperience in life makes them an easy target for exploitation and thus a greater need arises to entitle them with certain special rights so that their childhood can be protected.

There is no dearth of schemes existing at National as well as International level to ensure these rights to children. However, despite this, a vast majority of children are still impoverished. They are marginalized, vulnerable, and destitute, neglected and are deprived of their basic right to family care, protection, shelter, food, health and education. As a matter of fact, India has the largest population of street children.

The main aim of this conference is to foster an academic dialogue, promotion of research studies and publication, sharing of information and knowledge on issues, and creation of a national advocacy group to campaign for the protection and promotion of these rights of children.
